

A good friend has told me that often times we don't need to learn something new as much as we need to be reminded of what we already know.

To follow in that vein, I would propose that sometimes we don't need more reminders about what we should know as much as we need to practice what we already know.

So this week instead of spending 15 minutes reading an article reminding us again that we are supposed to serve others, let's use those 15 minutes to actually serve others.

That's it, 15 minutes...Serve someone, anyone. Serve somewhere, anywhere. Do something for someone else, anything. 15 minutes to practice and then let's share about our experiences in small groups this week.